"Our Message."

BASSETT & CO.
DRY GOODS.

It does not require an especial message from the President to tell the people what is the pressing and imperative demand of the Dry Goods business.

What our country needs and unanimously demands is the prompt and immediate repeal of High Prices, and the thorough establishment of the Cash System.

The "power of money" is easily seen in a house that does strictly a cash business. You will not only see it, but you, yourself, reap the benefits. The time has come for action. We must all unite and stand together in one common effort to save money. How can you better begin than to do your Fall business with a thoroughly reliable, one price, cash house.

The credit system of our country is building up and encouraging a fictitious and unreliable business, and loses its customers when they fail to pay. We sell only for cash, and pay cash for what we buy. Cash secures for us large discounts and buys the best things the market affords. Our Mr. Bassett writes from New York that "prices are firm on all lines, but we bought our New Fall Stocks as cheap as that scarce article 'Cash' will secure." Conservative and judicious buyers realize these facts, and to-day Hopkinsville has a business house which she points to with pride.

During the past season of unusual stringency, the credit houses of our land have sent up a cry that has been heard across the continent. Many of them, indeed, having been lost in the storm of financial disturbance. But here we are. Strong and confident as ever. The gratifying fact is, we have within our reach our every desire. This not only means for the customer the lowest possible price, but governs the purchasing rate among the wholesale houses. And above all enabling us to show novelties from the best markets of the world at prices not offered to buyers on credit. In it any wonder to you we remind the cash business of southwestern Kentucky?

What a national triumph it would be if all the business houses had to conduct their business on this sound, practical basis like we!

ONLY five passengers lost their lives on British railways in 1891, but there was a veritable slaughter of railway servants. Over 800 employes were killed and more than 8,000 injured.

DURING the first six months of this year 1,014 miles of railroad track was constructed. The Railway Age thinks that this indicates a total construction for the year of at least 2,000 miles, which it considers a good record, considering the times.

UNCLE SAM'S SOLDIERS.

Their Lot Cannot Be Said to Be a Happy One.

Favoritism at Washington Sadly Demoralizes the Army—A Complaint Preferred by Officers and Men—Frazer Post Duty.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"I do not see why any boy or young man with any ambition for the future should enlist in either the army or navy in time of peace," said a distinguished officer at the war department to-day.

"It seems to me that no career could be chosen with less prospect of reward for diligence, intelligence and capability. Of course I could not say these things publicly, for as have hard enough time keeping our ranks full now, and I ought not to discourage enlistments. As a matter of fact, however, our regular army is composed mainly of foreigners, many of them not naturalized."

"Why is the service distasteful?"

"Let me give you an example of my own experience. My company is stationed at an isolated post away out on the Upper Mississippi, where it is likely to remain for many years, unless called out by some emergency. There is a maddening monotony in the life we lead which is enforced but once a year when the government supplies are sent to us. I need to wonder why country people would stand out on their front doors steps, or in their front yards, to look at railroad trains pass by; but I understand it now. I appreciate the loneliness and monotony of farm life even better than folks on the farms. The passing railroad train, although they all look very much alike, tend to relieve the monotony of gazing into the same family faces all the year round, and talking to the same neighbors from day to day. But the farmer is not lonely compared with the soldier on a frontier post. I have seen the day, many a time, when the passing of a freight train or a cattle train, once a week, would have furnished me enough for us and relieved the terrible sameness of camp life. We would have traveled twenty or thirty miles, willingly, just to see a train rush by. You cannot understand what homesickness is until you have lived such a life for six months or more. But when you think of living that way for a year, or two years, or on up to twenty years you can possibly have a better idea of how dreadful and unhappy a life it is."

"Twenty years is an exaggeration, isn't it?"

"No, it is not. Gen. Crook spent twenty years in the service without obtaining a single leave of absence. Of course that is an exceptional case. I never heard of any other officer who served that long without leave; but I mention twenty years as the time limit.

"A man may serve on frontier posts and lead the most depressing sort of existence for from six months to twenty years; and yet he is expected to be happy all the time because he is serving his country. I tell you there is no fun in it."

My friend's conversation was so unusual and so interesting that I pressed him to tell me more of army life.

"Of course an officer can get leave of absence," he continued, "but he is not entitled to it. I know of officers who have married in haste to repent at leisure, married solely that they some companionship on the frontier; married, only to find afterwards that there was incompatibility between husband and wife. Then the poor girl was doomed to a terrible life, more terrible, because there are very few women at the army posts, and their stock of gossip soon runs out. Even when husband and wife are well mated the life a woman leads is one of almost diurnal misery; for woman is particularly a social creature, and at the army post she is bereft of society, even in a most limited sense. More than half the time I keep my wife east among her girlhood friends. I prefer that she should undergo the loneliness of camp life by myself to having her suffer it also, all the time. Moreover, when she returns to spend a few months with me, she is full of renewed life and gossip, and it does me good to hear her chatter and tell of the good times she has had; dancing, for instance, with fellows who tried to be her lovers before I married her."

THEIR ONLY RECREATION.

"How long is your company likely to remain at that post?"

"I said forever, and meant it. The war department has forgotten that we are there. It is a 'one company post,' and one of the least desirable in the country. You probably do not realize what a 'one company post' is. Well, it means that there are only three officers there, and they are their own sole entertainers. Could you imagine anything more likely to drive men to suicide or homicide? Of course pet three men to live together without other associates year in and year out? There is nothing new under the sun. There are no new stories, no new anecdotes of personal adventure, no new deeds of daring done by either of the three. Our individual histories are minutely known by each other, inside of two months. Then there is nothing to say but 'good morning' or 'good evening' for the rest of our lives to talk about. I am here in Washington for three weeks on detached duty, and you may well believe that I am happy while this duty lasts. But when I think of returning to that post I understand something of the feelings which permeate the minds of the unfortunate fellows who desert. By the way, you have undoubtedly read of a great number of desertions from the ranks of the army. And you have heard the cause of such desertions attributed, of course, to the cruelty of army officers. That is not true. The men desert because they cannot endure the solitary life which they lead. There is nothing of a feeble patriotic character to hold the men. There is no war, no prospect of war, not even an indication of Indian troubles, and the common soldiers reason and argue to themselves that it is no disgrace to desert.

"Of course, you know that the common soldiers in time of peace are not the best educated men in the land and they reason in a small intellectual circle, reaching conclusions which you and I know to be wrong. They conclude that there is nothing in the army for them, no prospect of promotion, no likelihood of actual fighting service; they conclude that, if they had known beforehand what soldiering is, they would not have enlisted; next, they reach the conclusion that it is no harm and no disgrace to desert in time of peace, and away they go. Of course, if we ever catch them, which is seldom, they are severely punished; but I always feel sorry for them, even when sitting on court-martial and condemning them."

MONOTONY OF CAMP LIFE.

"How about the morals of the men?"

"They soon reach the point where they have no moral sense at all. There is a great deal of drinking done, both by officers and men. In fact, you will rarely see an officer of the army on a frontier post who does not bear upon his countenance the marks of more or less deep dissipation. It's unfortunate, but it is true. I know that the same condition prevails aboard ship, where the officers and common sailors have as monotonous a time as we have at the post, save that they occasionally run into port and get 'liberty' to go ashore. When men are confined, without social interest, they unfortunately fall into the habit of drinking, and that usually leads to habitual drinking. The private soldiers, and the common sailors, are saved by their poverty. They cannot afford to drink as much as they would like to. But they are intensely profane, and obscenity increases with their terms of service. They become a very common, low set of creatures, kept in place and under subjection by rigid discipline and the consciousness of the power of the government over them."

"These are hard things to say of our soldiers."

"Very true; they are hard things to say of them, and they must seem especially harsh to you, coming as they do from an officer of the army, concerning his own men. But I am telling you the truth as seen from the standpoint of one on the inside. I am not maligning my men, nor traducing the soldiers of other regiments, but answering your questions candidly. I want to add that if there was any prospect of war with any foreign country, those same soldiers would stand by their colors and fight as long as they had any blood or breath in them. They are demoralized by the monotony of camp life. It would cost the general government some money for transportation, but it would improve the army if there were annual reunions of regiments, or of battalions. Moreover, after such reunions, when the companies are returned to their posts, they should be changed. Furthermore, and this is a serious matter, the army is sadly handicapped and demoralized by favoritism at Washington. There are colonels here, on detached duty at the war department, who have not been with their regiments for a long time. I could name some majors and captains who have never seen their companies or battalions. They have been dancing around the national capital for many years, enjoying through ties like long and private, while other men, and some of them vastly better men, are obliged to lead the demoralizing life I have in some measure described to you. It is a shame and an outrage. It is a disgrace to the entire army."

In speaking of this matter, my army friend became very warm and earnest. He mentioned the names of some officers of both the army and navy who have long lived in Washington, while their less influential brother officers are unable to get here on a visit more than once in a life time.

ALLATOONA SIGNAL MOUNTAIN.

missing, 707—more than one out of three. The confederate acknowledged loss was 799, but this is almost certainly an understatement. Their total force was probably not over 3,000. It may have been somewhat less.

The defenses are still at Allatoona, and but little altered in size and shape since the war. The only apparent change is that pines and oaks once more completely cover the hill.

A ditch is still about the Star fort, and from the bottom of the ditch to the top of the parapet there is still a height of about ten feet. The average diameter inside the parapet is seventy feet.

On the outer side of the pass is a strong fort, a little less in diameter than the Star fort, but with slightly higher walls.

The signal mountain at Allatoona is near the pass, and upon it was a tall tree, with cleats nailed upon its sides, and a platform built in the top. It was upon that platform that the signal officer stood who received Sherman's message to "Hold the Fort."

The signal mountain, however, was necessarily retreated from as the confederates began to encircle the pass, and the subsequent signaling was from a stump upon the high ground at the eastern side of the gap.

A few years after the war the singing evangelist, P. P. Bliss, was told the story of the battle and the signaling, and it powerfully affected his imagination. He wrote the hymn, "Hold the Fort," on the night that he first heard the story, and on the very next day he sang it in the Tabernacle in Chicago.

It at once became wonderfully popular, and thousands upon thousands have sung the song without knowing that the ideas were based upon actual occurrences.

"Pierre and long the battle rages,
But over he is hear;
Onward comes our great commander,
Cheer, my comrades, cheer!"

The African Cobra.

Lieut. Sefton says that the African cobra is known as the "spitting snake," on account of its power to throw its venom quite a distance into the eyes of its enemy. It is a lazy reptile, save when stirred to anger, when it cannot be equaled for swiftness and accuracy in spitting at or biting its victim. The spitting is accomplished by expelling the breath sharply through the mouth, so that the sooty venom flies straight as a pea thrown from a pipe into the victim's eyes. This cobra attains the length of six feet, and is large and powerful. It is distinctly formidable from the fact that it can swim in the rivers very swiftly, and has no fear in swimming, the cobra moves along very rapidly, with its nose and body above just above the water's surface. Lieut. Sefton declares that the bite of this snake will kill an ox, and never fails to kill a dog or a white man. There is a vine which, when the young leaves are crushed and applied as a poultice, will extract the poison; but it seems to act only on the native blood, since of two men, bitten and treated in exactly the same way, one, a native, recovered, and the white man died.—Golden Days.

Wood six Thousand Years Old.

It is seldom that wood which has grown more than four thousand years before the christian era is used in the construction of present-day residence, and yet this really happened recently in Edinburgh, where a mantel-piece was fashioned from wood said to be six thousand years old. An oak tree was found in a sandpit at Musselburgh's thirteen feet below the surface. Prof. Ticklin of the university of Edinburgh after personally examining the strata in which the oak was found, said the tree, which was five feet nine inches in diameter, must be at least six thousand years old, and described it as a relic of neolithic man. It was in a fine state of preservation, due to the sand, and was easily worked.—Boston Globe.

THE BOILER BURSTED.

Death Came Without Warning to W. N. McKee.

A GOOD CITIZEN'S AWFUL DEATH.

W. Nat McKee, a prominent farmer living near the city and a good and useful citizen, was buried into eternity Wednesday morning within the twinkling of an eye. Death came like a flash of lightning and the victim never knew what hit him. He was running an engine used for grinding grist for stock food when the boiler exploded without warning and Mr. McKee was instantaneously killed.

Pieces of the iron boiler struck him with such force that he was hurled 75 feet, though he was a man weighing 200 pounds. This seems almost incredible, but Mr. Thos. Winfree reports that the distance was ascertained by actual measurement. Mr. McKee's head was partly blown off, he was disemboweled and his rivers scattered in every direction. His legs were also broken and his body mashed and mutilated in a most horrible manner.

The hot water from the boiler seriously scalded the two colored workmen, Jim Crutchfield and Jasper Hays, but their injuries will not prove fatal.

A messenger on a foaming steed soon brought the news to the city, a distance of some three or four miles. Mr. L. H. McKee, of this city, and Mr. A. R. McKee, of Cauky, at once hurried to the scene and took charge of the sad duty of preparing the mutilated remains of their dead brother for the grave. The funeral services were held at the residence on the Nashville road yesterday morning and the interment took place in the cemetery here.

William Nathaniel McKee, familiarly known as Nat McKee, was a son of the late Chas. McKee, and was the fourth of a family of six children by the father's first marriage. He was born in February 1852 and was therefore in his 42nd year. Deceased was a man of the very best character—a solid, substantial, useful citizen. He was financially prosperous and recently inherited $6,000 or $8,000 from a relative, which added to his own accumulations entitled him to rank with the rich farmers of the county. He was a man of fine physique and perfect health and in the vigor of well preserved manhood. A few years ago he married Miss Belle Elliott, and they have one child, a little girl about three years old. Mr. McKee and his happy little family lived on a fine farm near the city and lacked nothing to make them enjoy life.

The engine that so suddenly ended his life was a portable steam engine, that he had used with a wheat thresher for many years. It was in a dilapidated condition, but was not regarded as unsafe by Mr. McKee. He had acted as his own engineer for years and the accident was not the result of any lack of knowledge in running the engine.

The sad act dent has caused a genuine feeling of sorrow and sympathy throug hout the entire c ity and surrouding country.

TEXAS LETTER.

DALLAS, TEXAS, Sept. 9-h, 1893—Mrs. D.'s trunks came in to Plano on time the next morning after our arrival and all is lovely and the goose hangs high. We remained in Plano eight days. This is a beautiful little town, has a population of 2,000 and is situated on the Cotton Belt R. R. some 600 miles west of Memphis and upon a beautiful mound with a good drainage from every side, surrounded for miles by a black rich waxy soil. Here in Plano a man can get the most beautiful landscape the eye of man ever beheld. You can see for miles any way the eye may turn; can see many of the towns for away; can see Decatur, a distance of 6 miles, Gyley 16 miles, Navada 15 miles, Allan 7 miles, and Rockwall 20 miles. We have been through all of these towns and over the country for twenty miles round Plano and found the soil all the same, but little variation. This town is situated in the heart of what is called the Black Lands of Texas. They run from Red River north and from the Rio Grande south-west. The many farm houses that can be seen dotted here and there look very much like the campers' tents and at night when lit up they form a beauty of bright lights. It has been very dry here this season, crops are good considering the drouth. Corn 50 to 60 bushels per acre, oats 50 to 100, wheat 15 to 35, cotton from a half to a bale; corn worth 35cts at the depot, wheat 55c to 60cts, oats 25cts, cotton 6½ to 7cts. Mr. J. Q. Wyatt, the R. R. Agent, showed us his freight book which showed that from this little town and over about the same miles in corn there will be duly 85 cars of grain, in August 147 cars, in 1892 100 cars, and in 1892 9,000 bales of cotton When the boys here need waiting on Mr. John W. Made a New Man

"I have been made a new man by Hood's Sarsaparilla. I had pains in my back, my languid and tired feet had no energy or appetite. I suffered from the eastern terminus across the property of Bettie Buckner and children to the latter's section of Walnut Street, at appearing in the Courier-Journal of August 19th, 1893, and the necessity for the opening of said street across said lot; and it appearing further to said Board of Council of said City that it will require at least in width and——feet in depth of the property of said Buckner and children to extend said street as aforesaid, and it further appearing that the City of Louisville will be compelled to condemn said lot for the purpose of said street, for which reason the Board of Council of said City that the city attorney for said city be, and he is hereby, directed to institute the proper legal proceedings against the aforesaid Bettie Buckner and children to condemn a sufficiency of said lot for public use for a continuation of said street across the lot of said Bettie Buckner and children at least in width and running to the intersection of Walnut Street.

For the adoption of this Ordinance all the Councilmen voted aye on its second passage, Sept. 8, '93.

from Nelson County came 30 miles east of Louisville, Ky. While here Mr. Forman invited us out to see his native Mustang grapevine. This vine is twenty inches around the base and would if allowed cover an acre of ground. It now covers about one half of an acre. Mr. Forman made 50 gallons of wine from this vine this season and gave to his five married children grapes enough to make all the presences they wanted and to his neighbors 30 gallons of grapes and he estimated this crop owing to the drouth as being a short half crop We found the country on from Plano to Dallas about the same as at Plano, up to near the the city of Dallas. Here we struck what is called the Sandy lands with a potosk growth, fin and around Dallas is very sandy land but they continued but a few miles southwest of Dallas then the black waxy sets in and continues on through the state running south west. Dallas has a population of 50,000 and is a fine thriving city. The new and magnificient Court House is now completed at a cost of 500,000 It is built of the Texas red rock and the Arkansas Grauite, and also the Texas red Granite. A great portion of it in polished so you can see yourself in it. The base is four feet thick and handsomely finished inside The various departments in each story are nicely arranged and are all occupied. The streets of Dallas are paved with Belgian blocks and have 7 off five inches long and filled with pitch, which make an almost like time street.

We have somewhat changed our course concerning land will go from Dallas through the Bois d' are lands and then to Gaveston. J. M. D.

MATRIMONIAL

LEAVELL HENRY.—Mr. Lum's Livingston Leavell and Miss Annie E. Henry, of South Christian, went over to Clarksville Wednesday and were married. It was not an elopement, but merely a romantic ride of the young couple. Mr. Leavell is a son of Capt. Geo. Leavell and is one of the thriftiest, worthiest and most popular young farmers in the county. He has recently purchased a fine farm near Beverly and is about completing a house in which he and his bride will shortly go to housekeeping. The bride is the youngest daughter of Col. Gano Henry, of California, and is not yet out of her teens by two or three years. She came from California, where she has lived for five years, last winter to spend the present time with her brother, Mr. Gano Henry, Jr Here she was met and won by the young gent to man who has just c ain at her for his own. The young couple left immediately for a bridal tour to the World's Fair, from which they will return in about ten days. They were accompanied to Clarksville by Mr. Douglas Bell and Miss Mary Henry.

FOSTER ADAMS—MR. J. T. Foster and Miss Mollie Adams, both of Elkton, were married in Clarksville Wednesday morning.

SIMPSON OWEN—MR. H. B. Simpson and Miss Fannie Owen, both of Sinking Fork, were married at the residence of Esq. W. H. Long, in this city, Wednesday morning, Esquire T. C. Tinsley performing the ceremony.

SHIRLEY HEATH—Mr. Oscar Smiley and Miss Mattie Reece, both of North Christian, came to the city Wednesday and were married, Rev. Lamb officiating. The marriage took place at the residence of Mr. W. R. Armstrong.

RINGLING BROS.' CIRCUS

The Great Aggregation to be Exhibited in this City.

The announcement that the Ringling Brothers' Greatest Shows, the largest and most extensive exhibition ever seen under canvass, is to be in Hopkinsville Saturday, Sept. 30, will be gratifying news to thousands to whom the fame of this aggregation is familiar and to other thousands who will welcome the opportunity to see it in all its magnificent completeness This great aggregation requires three railroad trains to transport it from city to city, while the exhibitions are given in three rings, on two elevated stages and upon a great third-of a mile track, under the largest canvas pavilions ever erected. The menagerie is the most complete zoological collection in America, while the circus performances is a constant succession of wonders. The acrobats, gymnasts, acrobats and riders number over three hundred of Europe and America's highest salaried artists including Charles W. Fish, the world's champion somersault rider; the Brothers Vernon, the greatest of all trapeze performers; a troupe of genuine Arabs and a company of Japanese acrobats from the court of the Mikado; while the picturesque features [of the exhibition embrace a marvelous spectacular horse ballet, in which one hundred noble equines perform the most astonishing evolutions; a school of twenty marvelously trained Mexican horses; a series of thrilling hippodrome races, and an aggregation of other new, rare and striking features,such as no other tented exhibition can ever present to the public. The visit of the Ringling Bros.' great circus will be an event never to be forgotten in the history of this city.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and leads to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

She had been a member of the Catholic church for a number of years. Her remains were interred at the Quarles burying ground, near Howell, Tuesday afternoon.

COLOSKY

GLASS—Carter Glass died in the city Monday of bronchial pneumonia after an illness of several months.

EVANS—Julian Evans died at his home a few miles north of the city Tuesday, of fever, aged 22 years.

The True Laxative Principle.

Of the plants used in manufacturing the pleasant remedy, Syrup of Figs, has e permanently beneficial effects on the human system, while the cheap vegetable extracts and mineral solutions, usually as medicines, are permanently injurious. Being well informed, you will use the true, remedy only. Manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

CREAM OF NEWS.

Last Day of Grace.

To-day closes the period for filing suits for the September term of Circuit Court. Already 122 suits have been filed with the Circuit Clerk, and there will probably be half a dozen more lodged to-day. Of the number twenty are petitions for divorce. There are more than a hundred old appearances on the docket and it is likely that a large number of these will be disposed of at this term of court, which begins Sep. 25. The docket will be a pretty full one as there are also several criminal cases to be tried. These are expected to occupy several days of the court.

Indicted the Sheriff.

The Trigg county grand jury returned a true bill last Monday against H. B. McKinney, Sheriff of the county, charging criminal negligence. About two weeks ago Jordan McNeal, a colored prisoner, escaped from officer McKinney while enroute from Roaring Springs to Cadiz, where he had been taken for examining trial. Mr. McKinney had his prisoner in a buggy when he suddenly sprang out and ran. He gave chase and fired several shots, but without effect, and McNeal made good his escape. We regret to learn of the action against the young officer, as he is an excellent gentleman and makes a good officer.

Over 1,250 School Children.

There are more than 1250 pupils now attending school in the various schools of Hopkinsville, white and colored. In the white public schools there are 580 and in the colored schools 485, making 1065 in the public schools. The Hopkinsville High school has 29 young men and the two colleges have more than 100 together, though their figures have not been given out. Besides these regular schools there are some private schools, kindergartens and music classes that instruct a good many other children.

The colored teachers of the county represent more brains and intelligence than took part in the recent anti Bob Lander cut and dried nigger need apply convention. Secretary Gresham knew when he had enough last year, and there will be a good many colored Greshams in Christian county this fall.

The action of the Colored Institute the other day in endorsing a Democrat for School Superintendent by a unanimous vote has opened the eyes and paralyzed the reasoning faculties of the Republican party hash-wielders They can hardly bring themselves to realize that the colored voter has attained his second freedom and will hereafter think for himself and vote as he pleases, free from the intimidation of Republican masters who use him only to further their own selfish ends. The secret ballot will hereafter be full of surprises.

Incorrect fitting Spectacles and Eyeglasses.

We will take it for granted that your spectacls loose are a perfect fit for your eyes, but are you sure that the frames which contain the lens are a correct fit in every way? (which is rarely ever the case) If not, you are deprived of that comfort that is expected, and that you should have from your glasses, as in every instance of misfitting frames they do incalculable injury to the eyes. So do not neglect this very important point, just because you do not fully understand it or realize their bad effects. It is not every optician who can fit glasses well, for one can fit frames to the face and eyes correctly. It requires a certain amount of mechanical skill, which all cannot acquire. Now as accuracy and competency in workmanship, as well as truthfulness, is characteristic of my 20 years of success in business—surely my house ought to be the safest now to patronize, and for all who need anything in my line.

CATHOLIC EXCURSION

The Greatest World's Fair Event.

The most attractive feature of the Columbian Exposition season to Catholics in this country will be the week of September 4th, as that is to be called Catholic week at the World's Fair, owing to the Congresses of most or all, societies of that Church convening there then. In view of this, extensive preparations have been made by the Very Rev. Father Boutchet, Vicar General of the Louisville Diocese, with the well organized Bonte, for special Trains to take a large party from Kentucky, leaving Louisville Sunday morning, September 3d, from Tenth Street Union Station. He, fortunately, made his rail road contract before the agreement between Chicago lines to advance rates, consequently members of his party will have the benefit of low rates, as arrangements also are made to stop at a beautiful new first-class hotel near the Exposition grounds, where a suitable discount was made to secure the party Though a large party is expected, this is the year railways are prepared, and it is certain that the Mouse's splendid equipment will be used for all. Father Bouchet extends, through the Kentucky Press, an invitation to all to participate in the arrangements he has made, and go to the Fair with his party.

Applications for information in detail should be addressed to E. H. BACON, D. P. A. Mouse Route, Louisville, Ky.

We refund money in every instance where it fails to cure.

LOOK OUT.

"In peace prepare for war, in health for sickness." The old adage is always wise and timely, especially at this season. Summer Complaint, with its debilitating influences. Nerves are deranged, appetite failing, energy and ambition giving way. Shortly will come fever and ague, bilious fever, etc. Don't wait for these things to appear, but be on your guard every passing hour and resist the approach every hour. Now is the time. Repair the waste. Restore the vitality. Fortify the system. Ward off the perilous attacks of Malaria and pass safely and happily through. You can do this by using Dr. King's

MUSICAL MATTERS.

GOUNOD, the great French composer, has been far from well for some time. Owing to his advanced age, seventy-five, grave apprehensions are felt concerning him.

PADEREWSKI has gone to his home in Poland for rest and preparation, and will remain in retirement until October, when he is expected to make his first appearance in Paris.

JENNY LIND was one of the first persons to travel in a private car in this country. The hired car, had the seats removed and fitted it up with her own luxurious household furniture.

PADEREWSKI has earned in London the distinction of being known as a "guinea mee." With the exception of Rabenathe he is the only man whose performances command a guinea for seats in the stalls.

INDUSTRIAL POINTS.

THE annual manufacture in Europe at the present time, according to the latest statistics, is something like 1,850,000 square yards of lookinglass.

TWO BASKET mills at Dover, Del., turned out 2,000 peach baskets per day during the summer. The work is done with great ease, rapidity and precision. The fastest basket maker in the Dover mills makes from 350 to 500 baskets per day. He is paid one cent per basket.

MR. H. HARRY BENNETT, of Whittier, Cal., last year imported pampas grass from South America to the ranch and raised 3,000,000 plumes. These make handsome decorations. One million of these were sent to the world's fair, and he has exported over 800,000 to Europe.

DOINGS OF AUTHORS.

HAVING completed his "Prince of India," Gen. Wallace has plans for another story, which he is now at work, but it will probably take him several years to complete it.

HENRY ALDEN NOE, the well-known writer of tales of travel, was found in the deep forest near Old Mystic, a few days ago almost covered with wounds. He was a successful one and it is supposed that he was the victim of robbers who infest the district.

MRS. LEONARD ASH, widow of the eminent portrait and miniature painter, Rapher of Music, de Recumbe, died recently in London. Besides numerous published recollections of Chateaubriand, Mrs. de Stael and Benjamin Constant. She was seventy-five years of age.

GEORGE FREDERICK PARSONS, for ten years a writer for the New York Tribune, died recently. Besides numerous short stories, Mr. Parsons wrote the introduction to Belzac's works, published by Roberts Brothers in Boston. He had a wide acquaintance, both in the east and west, among men of letters.

RETIRED STATESMEN.

Familiar Faces That Are Now Absent from Washington.

Where the People of the United States Went a Change They Usually Get It—Some of the Newly-Created Senators.

[Special Washington Letter.]

The sovereign citizens of the republic do not fully realize what great changes they effect when they peacefully place their ballots in the boxes upon election days. The bloodless revolutions of peace in this country are visible to the naked eye, in their results, only when a new congress assembles. When the speaker and the vice president take their gavels and rap their respective bodies to order, the absence of so many old familiar faces from the halls of legislation indicates to the observer in the press gallery, more than at any other time or in any other place, that the people have spoken and their will has been obeyed.

From the floor of the senate the familiar face and figure of Senator Dawes are missed immediately. Senator Hawen, chairman of the committee on Indian affairs, has been for many years the champion of the rights of the wards of the nation. In the place of this venerable and distinguished statesman the legislators of Massachusetts have given to the senate Henry Cabot Lodge, the eloquent expounder of republican principles.

Senator Sawyer, of Wisconsin, who was for many years chairman of the senate committee on post offices and post roads, a conspicuous figure upon the floor of the senate, is no longer here, but has been succeeded by Senator John L. Mitchell, of Milwaukee. Senator Allen, of Washington, the youngest looking man in the senate for the past three years, has failed of re-election and is no longer here. Senator Blodgett, of New Jersey, who looked so much like Senator Ilill, as they used to sit together and expose their round bald heads to the view of the galleries, is no longer with us. We also miss from the senate chamber Senator Casey, of North Dakota; Senator Felton, of California; Senator Hiscock, of New York (who has been succeeded by Senator Murphy); Senator Paddock, of Nebraska; Senator Sanders, of Montana; Senator Warren, of Wyoming. Vatly, Blackwell, the people have given and their voice has been heard in the United States senate chamber.

SENATOR MURPHY.

In the house of representatives we miss Horace Bartine, of Nevada, the active and energetic champion of the free coinage of silver; Charles E. Belknap, of Grand Rapids, Mich., the diligent worker on the committee on military affairs, and brilliant storywriter concerning the events of the late war; James H. Hount, of Georgia, upon whose retirement from the house at the close of the last session leading representatives of both sides of the hall delivered eulogies concerning his great public life; Walter H. Hutton, of Iowa, who so diligently worked to have the pansy recognized as the national flower; Joseph D. Sayers, of the blue azure of the national emblem; John L. Jolley, of South Dakota, one of the best men ever sent to congress from any state; John Lind, of Minnesota, the eloquent champion of the interstate commerce law; Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, and Mitchell, of Wisconsin, both of whom have been sent to the senate; Samuel W. Peel, of Arkansas, late chairman of the committee on Indian affairs, and many others whom we had learned to know as long time friends, but concerning whom the people, by the exercise of their sovereign will, decreed a change.

But, after all, so many of the old familiar faces are left to us that we shall soon become accustomed to the changes and make acquaintances with the new members of both houses and the world will wag on in these legislative halls just as usual. In the senate we have with us yet Mr. Allison, of Iowa; Mr. Cockrell, of Missouri; Mr. Chandler, of New Hampshire; Mr. Gorman, of Maryland; and many others of like character and distinction. In the house of representatives we have Speaker Crisp; Mr. Reed, of Maine; Mr. McMillin, of Tennessee; Mr. Burrows, of Michigan; Mr. Kilgore, of Texas; Mr. Dolliver, of Iowa; Mr. Springer, of Illinois; Mr. Bailey, of Texas, and many others whose names are household words throughout the country.

The new faces in the house of representatives are quite numerous, and upon these people, with whom the newspaper men are about to get acquainted, they will rely a great deal for their best items of news. When a man commences a legislative career in Washington he usually pays more attention to the details of the work in hand than do the men who have been here for a number of years; and consequently from those gentlemen the energetic representatives of the metropolitan dailies usually secure their choicest and most startling pieces of general information.

But to see the old familiar faces, the dear familiar faces, the never changing faces, one has to stand in the lobbies or corridors of the house and senate. Here are the claimants who come every year seeking justice at the hands of the government. They have bills introduced by senators and representatives and they wait from day to day and week to week until the weeks run into months and each session is passed by, hoping against hope for justice which never comes. The congress of the United States may be appealed to upon these people, with whom the newspaper men are about to get acquainted, they will rely a great deal for their best items of news. When a man commences a legislative career in Washington he usually pays more attention to the details of the work in hand than do the men who have been here for a number of years; and consequently from those gentlemen the energetic representatives of the metropolitan dailies usually secure their choicest and most startling pieces of general information.

They have bills introduced by senators and representatives and they wait from day to day and week to week until the weeks run into months and each session is passed by, hoping against hope for justice which never comes. The congress of the United States may be appealed to, but it never will be, honest enough either in the abstract or concrete, either individually or collectively, to pay the obligations of the government which have been made by executive officers of the republic from time to time. This has become so well recognized a condition that to be a claimant here before congress is to excite sympathy at once. About two years ago my readers were given a history of the claim of William McGarrahan as an exemplification of the fact that justice is almost impossible of attainment before the congress. That honorable gentleman has been kneeling at the doors of the senate and house for thirty-seven years, praying and pleading for justice, and it has been denied him. In the summer of 1892 a bill was passed authorizing Mr. McGarrahan to go before the court of claims and prove his title to valuable mineral lands and then, after thirty-four years of effort, when justice seemed within reach, President Harrison vetoed the bill.

REST HOUSE, 10 STORY MAIN, 150 AND 152 FEET HIGH.

There are many claimants here who have shady claims. Sometimes claims of doubtful merit are passed; or, it might better be said, that for times past such claims have been successfully carried through congress. It is a notorious fact that one man who secured the passage of a bill appropriating $25,000 to pay him for ice furnished the government troops in the war having melted while on the way to its destination. To-day, not satisfied with securing that sum of money upon a shadowy presentation of a case, the same claimant is here with a bill which proposes to grant him a large sum of money as interest upon the amount originally claimed by him, the interest being computed from 1866 to the date of the passage of the bill paying him for the melted ice.

But, the most familiar faces are those of the ex-congressmen who are permanently located here as attorneys for claimants. These gentlemen, as ex-members of the house, have the privilege of going upon the floor of the house while it is in session and lobbying for the passage of bills in which they are interested as paid attorneys for claimants. This business of practicing before congress is a growing and profitable one; and it is proper, too. There is more need of good attorneys to present honest claims before congress than for the prosecution of claims before courts of law. Justice is secured in the courts of the capitol.

In the ladies' waiting-rooms of both the house and the senate there are to be seen to-day some faces familiar to all; and it is a pity that they are here. They are the faces of women, some of them beautiful, few of them plain, and many of them hardened by lives of malnutrition and wilderness. They are here ostensibly for the purpose of securing congressional influence in order to secure government appointments; but in reality to accomplish purposes unworthy. One of them, a woman whose gray hairs alone indicate the ravages of time, not many years ago almost led into the depths of infamy a disgrace a man who subsequently became a national character and died respected and honored of all men. This woman, however, for a time, fascinated him and brought him to the verge of ruin. His downward career was seen, lamented, and the end seemed inevitable, when he was rescued from the power of the spell by the arrival of his aged and beloved mother, who had been sent for by one of his friends who knew that she alone could save him. Although than past her seventieth year, the Christian mother went for her talented son, and lived to see him attain his proper place in the political, social and religious world.

In the press galleries the familiar faces of correspondents of a few years since are growing financially strong. The press galleries are indicative of the prosperity of our daily newspapers, and their representatives are received warmly and hospitably by the old boys who are growing bald and gray in the service.

VERSES FOR ALL.

The Patchy Man.

Whenever there's trouble in this thing or that,
No matter how distant the place,
Who's always ready to help you out?
Of that war stigma gets may to trace,
The answer proper would elate to the task,
Still doing the best that he can
Unless things go well at his reason to ask—
But along comes the patchy man.

He's a different home and a work that is low
He likes at discharging certain,
His views might I have thought it, but don't you know—
In securities other he stays
Though full of good cheer and contentment at
Your task for the day you began,
You'll presently almost regret you were born—
Along comes the patchy man.

Shall people be led by the raven whose note
Is the boding of ill to the gay?
Shall mere puny Terror take Thrift by the throat
And Courage her mission forbear?
No way by which you may succeed to-day,
It has hit on a different plan;
Its aim is understood that the sensible way
Is to sit on the patchy man.

Garden seed Seeds.

When our babe he goeth walking in his garden,
Arrayed in nothing but the sunbeams play;
The potion ing seed for good to rise
And there as they should to him,
As forth he goes in his kingly way,
And blessings of the wood to him
Make music gentle music, all the while
When our babe he goeth walking in his garden

When our babe he goeth swinging in his swing,
Then the night it moaneth ever sweetly down,
The little stars are kind to him,
The moon sly hath a mind to him
And ingeth on his head a golden crown
The winds they are kind to him
A song, the gentle song of Bethlehem
When our babe he goeth swinging in his swing.

Mollie's Problems.

There's lots of things I cannot understand,
It really makes no matter how I try;
Like why the crows comes on my little head
Because the sun is up in the sky.

I never understood why birds eat worms
Instead of pie and pudding full of plum
I don't see why a baby always squirms,
Or why the hens are fond of little sums.

I cannot understand why doggies bark
Instead of talking sense like you and me;
And why the cows chew cuds when I do dark,
Instead of when it's light, I cannot see.

I wonder what it is makes children grow,
And why they have an appetite like Bess;
But puzzlingest of all the things I know
Is why papa smokes such awful bad cigars
